ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We would like to thank a number of individuals and organizations that made this third edition of the Human Freedom Index—copublished by the Fraser Institute, the Liberales Institut at the Friedrich Naumann Foundation for Freedom, and the Cato Institute—possible.

Fred McMahon of the Fraser Institute once again served as an assiduous project editor, whose expertise and careful eye improved the quality of the report. His work on the topic of freedom and his management of many of the scholarly seminars that led up to this publication played a key role in the creation of the index. We thank him for his collegiality, discipline, and valuable insights.

We are grateful also to Annett Witte and Steffen Hentrich at the Liberales Institut for their support, and to their colleague Detmar Doering, former director at the Institut and an early and active champion of this project.

Our index builds on the work of the Fraser Institute's economic freedom project; thus we owe a debt of gratitude to Michael Walker, the Institute's former executive director and initiator of that research program, and to the authors of the annual Economic Freedom of the World report, James Gwartney, Robert Lawson, and Joshua Hall. All of them laid the groundwork for this report and generously contributed their time and advice to its creation.

Our Russian colleague Andrei Illarionov was an enthusiastic and active proponent of this project, and his insights helped shape the content and structure of the index. We thank him for helping to initiate this research and for continuing to be a valuable source of input and advice.

Our research assistant, Guillermina Sutter Schneider, deserves special thanks for spending untold amounts of time helping to compile, organize, and check data and for contacting data sources when necessary. Thanks also to Erin Partin, who provided research assistance.

Finally, we would like to acknowledge the generous contribution of the Lotte & John Hecht Memorial Foundation for supporting this project and the sponsors of—and numerous scholars who participated in—the seminars out of which this index arose: the first, in Atlanta, sponsored by Liberty Fund; three in Potsdam, sponsored by the Liberales Institut; and one in Washington, D.C., sponsored by the Cato Institute.

FOREWORD

Freedom seems to be under attack in major nations around the world.

Journalists and opposition leaders are killed in Russia; the Chinese Communist Party stifles dissent on the mainland while threatening the rule of law in Hong Kong;¹ tens of thousands are arrested in Turkey on dubious grounds after a failed coup; Venezuela descends into desperation and suppression—the list could go on.

Populism has been on the rise in Europe, North America, and parts of Asia and Latin America. Populism threatens freedom by pitting “us” against “them” and, when successful, by often suppressing the freedom of “them” as well as undermining the rule of law, the essential guardian of freedom.

Even once hopeful developments turn bad. The apparent triumph of democracy in Myanmar has been followed by the suppression and bloody expulsion of the Rohingya. The Arab Spring has descended into horrid violence in Syria, the Republic of Yemen, and Libya, and increased repression in Egypt.

Not all the news is unfortunate. I write this from Tunis, Tunisia, where I am meeting with some of the leaders who saved this nation from either a descent into violence or a return to an Egypt-like repression.

Populism seems to have been checked, though hardly eliminated, in Europe, and several Latin American nations have turned away from populism—Argentina being the prime example, though populist threats loom in Brazil and Mexico.

This is why the Human Freedom Index is so important. The conflicting data and noise can muddy the signal. This index attempts to organize the data objectively and thus mute the noise and clarify the signal.

It uses only third-party data to avoid imposing the biases of the authors. Of course, any data source likely has biases, but by using 79 data streams from a multitude of sources, the index gains a broader perspective that is not beholden to a single point of view. Unfortunately, this also means using data for 2015 for the 2017 report in order for all the sources to be available.

The index is also innovative in that it is the first to develop a broad measure of freedom. Previously, separate indexes had measured economic freedom and personal freedom, though both are essential to overall freedom.

Many indexes of freedom are also incomplete in that they do not take into account elements essential to freedom and its protection. This importantly includes the rule of law and safety and security.

If individuals are not protected by the law and treated equally under it, governments and powerful cliques can attack the freedom of the poor and weak. Safety and security are also essential to freedom. If it is not safe to walk down the street, to express yourself, to attend a meeting, and so on, freedom is diminished. Yet many measures of freedom do not count these elements.

Sadly, this index bears out the common perception that freedom is under threat. Overall levels of freedom have fallen since 2008, a fall that continued between 2014 and 2015.

One of the great advantages of this index is the granularity it provides. Within economic and personal freedom, the index examines 12 different areas: rule of law; security and safety; freedom of movement; freedom of religion; association, assembly, and civil society; expression and information; identity and relationships; size of government; legal system and property rights; sound money;² freedom to trade; and regulation.

Only three areas have shown an increase in freedom since 2008—namely, sound money, freedom to trade, and regulation, the latter two with relatively small gains. The big losers are rule of law; movement; association, assembly, and civil society; and expression and information. (See Figure 6.)

Similarly, freedom declined between 2008 and 2015 in most regions of the world, particularly Eastern Europe, Central Asia, and the Middle East and North Africa. While losses in regions that have seen a decline in freedom are typically larger than gains in regions that have seen increases, East Asia, sub-Saharan Africa, and South Asia all had significant advances. (See Figure 7.)

The index also allows study of the relationship between freedom and other factors, such as per capita gross domestic product. The Economic Freedom of the World index has been used in hundreds of empirical, peer-reviewed studies to examine the relationship between it and such outcomes as prosperity; reduced poverty; longer lives; improved educational levels, particularly for females; environmental improvement; employment; and so on. The Human Freedom Index permits similar studies of the impact of overall freedom.

The Human Freedom Index serves as an invaluable tool for tracking freedom with granularity, both conceptually and geographically, and for enabling researchers to investigate whether freedom promotes good or bad outcomes. My compliments to Ian Vásquez and Tanja Porčnik.

NOTES

1. “Truth, Justice and the Chinese Way: China Is Threatening the Rule of Law in Hong Kong,” The Economist, August 24, 2017, <https://www.economist.com/news/leaders/21727069-britains-silence-deafening-china-threatening-rule-law-hong-kong>.

2. This category might strike some as odd, but high levels of inflation, for example, erode property rights, security, and the rule of law. These developments undermine freedom, as extreme examples such as Zimbabwe and Venezuela demonstrate.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Human Freedom Index (HFI) presents a broad measure of human freedom, understood as the absence of coercive constraint. This third annual index uses 79 distinct indicators of personal and economic freedom in the following areas:

- Rule of Law
- Security and Safety
- Movement
- Religion
- Association, Assembly, and Civil Society
- Expression and Information
- Identity and Relationships
- Size of Government
- Legal System and Property Rights
- Access to Sound Money
- Freedom to Trade Internationally
- Regulation of Credit, Labor, and Business

The HFI is the most comprehensive freedom index so far created for a globally meaningful set of countries. The HFI covers 159 countries for 2015, the most recent year for which sufficient data are available. The index ranks countries beginning in 2008, the earliest year for which a robust enough index could be produced.

On a scale of 0 to 10, where 10 represents more freedom, the average human freedom rating for 159 countries in 2015 was 6.93. Among countries included in this report, the level of freedom decreased slightly (-0.05) compared with 2014, with 61 countries increasing their ratings and 97 decreasing. Since 2008, the level of global freedom has also decreased slightly (-0.12), with about half of the countries in the index increasing their ratings and half decreasing.

The top 10 jurisdictions in order were Switzerland, Hong Kong, New Zealand, Ireland, Australia, Finland, Norway, Denmark, and, tied at 9th place, the Netherlands, and the United Kingdom. Selected countries rank as follows: Canada (11), Sweden (13), Germany (16), the United States (17), Japan (27), South Korea (29), France (33), Italy (35), Chile (37), South Africa (68), Mexico (73), Indonesia (78), Turkey (84), Kenya (89), Malaysia (97), India (102), United Arab Emirates (116), Russia (126), China (130), Nigeria (133), Pakistan (141), Zimbabwe (146), Saudi Arabia (149), Iran (154), Egypt (155), Venezuela (158), and Syria (159).

Out of 17 regions, the highest levels of freedom are in Western Europe, Northern Europe, and North America (Canada and the United States). The lowest levels are in the Middle East and North Africa, Eastern Europe (Moldova, Russia, and Ukraine), South Asia, and sub-Saharan Africa. Women-specific freedoms, as measured by seven indicators in the index, are strongest in five European regions (Central Europe and the Baltics, Western Europe, Northern Europe, Eastern Europe and Southern Europe) and North America and are least protected in the Middle East and North Africa, South Asia, and sub-Saharan Africa.

Countries in the top quartile of freedom enjoy a significantly higher average per capita income ($38,871) than those in other quartiles; the average per capita income in the least-free quartile is $10,346.

The HFI also finds a strong relationship between human freedom and democracy. Hong Kong is an outlier in this regard.

The findings in the HFI suggest that freedom plays an important role in human well-being, and they offer opportunities for further research into the complex ways in which freedom influences, and can be influenced by, political regimes, economic development, and the whole range of indicators of human well-being.

ON OUR THIRD ANNUAL REPORT

This third annual report presents a broad measure of human freedom around the world. It builds upon a multiyear program of research and discussions held in Europe and North America that involved scholars from many disciplines and countries. It uses, adapts, and evolves the methodologies that emerged from the decades-long work of the Fraser Institute to define and measure economic freedom with the Economic Freedom of the World index.¹ The economic freedom project has demonstrated the power of such measurement to increase understanding about the concept of freedom and its contribution to human well-being. A central purpose of this report is to paint a broad but reasonably accurate picture of the extent of overall freedom in the world. A larger purpose is to more carefully explore what we mean by freedom and to better understand its relationship to any number of other social and economic phenomena. This research could also help us more objectively observe the ways in which various freedoms—be they economic or civil, for example—interact with one another. We hope that this index will become a resource for scholars, policymakers, and interested laypeople alike and that its value will increase as it is annually updated, thus allowing us to observe numerous relationships through time.

The Human Freedom Index casts a wide net in an attempt to capture as broad a set of freedoms as could be clearly identified and measured. Some freedoms that could be clearly identified, such as the freedom to use drugs, could not be included because internationally comparable data could not be found. In other cases, data and clarity could be achieved for too few countries to satisfy the goal of making a global index. The index in this report is the most comprehensive freedom index ever created for a globally meaningful set of countries.

That said, we and the authors of the other preliminary papers and indexes that have contributed to the creation of this index² recognize that the global characterization of the state of human freedom published here is a work in progress. It is published with satisfaction but also with humility. We believe that we have constructed a Human Freedom Index that provides a solid foundation for the ensuing work of refinement and recalibration in the face of new data sources and new understanding as time passes. In that spirit, we welcome feedback, which may be appropriate in further consideration of the data found in the index and published in this volume.

DEFINING AND MEASURING FREEDOM

The contest between liberty and power has been ongoing for millennia. For just as long, it has inspired competing conceptions of freedom. Plato and Hobbes, for example, thought that extensive or absolutist rule over society was compatible with their definition of freedom because in their view it would prevent society from descending into violence or chaos, which they considered more detrimental to freedom than a powerful state. Others, such as the 6th-century BCE Chinese philosopher Lao-tzu and the 16th-century Spanish scholastics, expressed and developed ideas consistent with the view of the father of modern political philosophy, John Locke, that freedom implies that an individual not “be subject to the arbitrary Will of another, but freely follow his own.”³

This index follows that latter tradition, which in the past several hundred years has shaped the modern, liberal world. Freedom in our usage is a social concept that recognizes the dignity of individuals and is defined by the absence of coercive constraint.⁴ (That contrasts with a mechanistic concept whereby anything that limits a person’s ability to do what she wants—be it a natural, physical barrier or another person who happens to be standing in her way—is considered an infringement on her freedom.) Freedom thus implies that individuals have the right to lead their lives as they wish as long as they respect the equal rights of others.

Isaiah Berlin best elucidated this notion of freedom, commonly known as negative

“The contest between liberty and power has been ongoing for millennia.”

“Economic freedom is not just inherently valuable, it also empowers individuals to exercise other freedoms.”

liberty.⁵ In the simplest terms, negative liberty means noninterference by others. Berlin contrasts that type of liberty with positive liberty, which requires the removal of constraints that impede one’s personal improvement or the fulfillment of his potential as the individual understands it. When positive liberty, however, is imposed by others, it undermines negative liberty since individuals naturally have conflicting views on whether and how to achieve self-improvement. As in the case of the totalitarian systems of the 20th century, this discrepancy allows rulers to ignore the wishes of people and commit torture and other atrocities in the name of some higher form of freedom. Berlin further warned, as did F. A. Hayek, against the common tendency to call other good things—think of income or housing, for example—“freedom,” since this merely causes confusion.⁶

Negative liberty “comes in only one flavor—the lack of constraint imposed on the individual,”⁷ whereas positive freedom is far more likely to mean different things to different people and thus cannot be measured independent of the goals that conflicting ideologies or groups might identify with freedom.

This index is thus an attempt to measure the extent to which the negative rights of individuals are respected in the country observed. By negative rights, we mean freedom from interference—predominantly by government—in people’s right to choose to do, say, or think anything they want, provided that it does not infringe on the rights of others to do likewise. These rights protect freedoms such as freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, sexual freedom, economic freedom, and so on. Some of the rights that individuals legitimately claim depend partially or wholly on action by government to be realized. The right to personal security is the most important, but security in one’s property rights and the rule of law also require government action.

While aspects of liberty associated with democracy and political freedom—freedom of speech, assembly, public demonstration—are included in this index, democracy or political freedom is not. Political freedom is important, but it does not mean democracy alone or unrestrained democracy. It is ideally some combination of the division of power, limited government, decentralization, and structural characteristics designed to control the powers of the majority. For example, countries such as Canada and the United States have democratic elections and constitutional constraint as well as separation of powers and decentralization. The United Kingdom has checks and balances and other limits on power, but it has no written constitution. The issue of how political freedom can best be determined and which of its forms is most consistent with personal, economic, and civil freedom is a major area of ongoing research. This report does not address that topic directly. However, it is hoped that the data provided here will assist researchers as they seek to determine the political structure most consistent with political freedom and the sustainability of personal, economic, and civil freedom. In that spirit, we look at the relationship between human freedom and democracy in the final section of this report.⁸

We use the following criteria to select data for the index: the data come from credible external sources and, for the sake of objectivity, are not generated by us; the index is transparent on methodology and sources; and the report covers as large a number of countries over as long a time period as is possible given the data available. As previously noted, we generally measure official restrictions on freedom, although some measures capture social or nonofficial violations of liberty (e.g., violence or conflict measures).

This index fills a gap in the literature by examining overall freedom, including economic and other human freedoms. Existing economic freedom indexes examine only the former, of course. Similarly, other surveys of freedom focus on subsets of freedom that exclude economic freedom. Yet all these freedoms are crucial. In fact, early systemic writings on freedom in the Enlightenment often focused on economic liberalism, or what we would identify with economic freedom, as an intrinsic part of overall freedom. This index, thus, for the first time develops a broad measure of human freedom rather than select aspects of it. We combine economic freedom measures from the Economic Freedom of the World index with measures of what we call personal freedoms. Our definition of economic freedom is that of James Gwartney, Robert Lawson, and Walter Block: “Individuals have economic freedom when property they acquire without the use of force, fraud, or theft is protected from physical invasions by others and they are free to use, exchange, or give their property as long as their actions do not violate the identical rights of others.”⁹ Economic freedom thus exists when there is voluntary exchange, competition, personal choice, and protection of persons and their property.

One of the biggest challenges in constructing any index is the organization and weighting of the variables. Our guiding principle is that the structure should be simple and transparent. All the data that we use in the index are available and their organization clearly presented. This means that other researchers may restructure the index to their own preferences. We believe the structure and weighting system we have chosen (after long discussions with our advisory group), if not perfect for everyone, makes sense and is consistent with the literature on freedom.¹⁰

The economic freedom subindex receives half the weight in the overall index, while safety and security and other personal freedoms that make up the personal freedom subindex receive the remaining weight. We weigh economic and all personal freedoms in our index equally for two reasons. First, economic activities, arguably, predominate in the everyday lives of most people as they seek, at a minimum, to survive and to otherwise improve their welfare. Thus, the strong weighting for economic freedom reflects how we live our lives. Second, economic freedom decreases the dependence of individuals on government or other potential forces in society that would restrict liberty or attempt to centralize power. As such, economic freedom is not just inherently valuable, it also empowers individuals to exercise other freedoms. Thus, the weighting reflects how economic freedom interacts with other freedoms. This point is illustrated by a remark of Hayek’s: “A complete monopoly of employment . . . would possess unlimited powers of coercion. As Leon Trotsky discovered: ‘In a country where the sole employer is the state, opposition means death by slow starvation. The old principle, who does not work shall not eat, has been replaced by a new one: who does not obey shall not eat.’”¹¹

That is an extreme case, but it illustrates the broader point that where economic freedom is limited, the government or powerful cliques possess great control over where you work, how much you are paid, whether you are able to find employment in the formal economy (with many attendant benefits), whether you get a promotion, where you live (and whether you are subsidized), what kind of job you have, whether you are able to adequately feed and clothe your family, and so on. In the absence of economic freedom, the powers-that-be have many tools of coercion to block other freedoms. These tools of coercion fade as people gain the power to make their own economic decisions.

We therefore equally weigh economic freedom because of its central importance in daily life and because it enables other freedoms. This weighting, like any weighting in any index, will not be perfect, but we believe it is a good approximation of how people live their lives and of the relation between economic and other freedoms.

We use 2015 as the latest year in our index because it is the most recent year for which sufficient data are available. For the personal freedom subindex, we use 37 variables covering 141 countries for the year 2008. The index covers an increasing number of countries for subsequent years. For the year 2015, we use 37 variables covering 159 countries. In selecting the countries, we have limited ourselves to those that are presented in the Economic Freedom of the World report. In selecting time periods, we use 2008 as the earliest year for which we are able to produce a robust enough index (many indexes of civil or other liberties are relatively new for a large number of countries).

“Where economic freedom is limited, the government or powerful cliques possess great control.”

“Without security or the rule of law, liberty is degraded or even meaningless.”

In the personal freedom index, we have two equally weighted parts. The first is legal protection and security, made up of Rule of Law and Security and Safety. The other half of the personal freedom index is made up of specific personal freedoms: Movement; Religion; Association, Assembly, and Civil Society; Expression and Information; and Identity and Relationships.

This, too, we believe, provides an advance over other freedom indexes, which fail to account for the interaction between the rule of law and security on the one hand and specific freedoms on the other. Without the rule of law and security, specific freedoms cannot, in a practical sense, be lived out. The rule of law and security are essential to provide reasonable assurance that life is protected. Security and safety are fundamental for survival and for the exercise of a vast array of freedoms. The rule of law, by providing predictable order and reducing arbitrary conduct by the authorities, further facilitates an environment in which freedoms are safeguarded. Without security or the rule of law, liberty is degraded or even meaningless. The most famous expression of this idea is perhaps found in Locke, who conceptualized the rule of law and security as a unified bundle, just as we do:

The end of law is not to abolish or restrain, but to preserve and enlarge freedom: for in all the states of created beings capable of laws, “where there is no law, there is no freedom;” for liberty is to be free from restraint and violence from others; which cannot be where there is not law: but freedom is not, as we are told, “a liberty for every man to do what he lists:” (for who could be free, when every other man’s humour might domineer over him?) but a liberty to dispose, and order as he lists, his person, actions, possessions, and his whole property, within the allowance of those laws under which he is, and therein not to be subject to the arbitrary will of another, but freely follow his own.¹²

A security state may increase or appear to increase some aspects of safety, but it would curtail freedoms by empowering the state to violate rights. Thus, legal security and specific personal freedoms are both necessary conditions for high levels of personal freedom. We believe the equal weighting provides a reasonable approximation of this interaction.

The index is derived from a total of 79 distinct indicators (37 from the personal freedom subindex and 42 from the economic freedom subindex) covering 159 countries. (Table 1 outlines the categories and the components in each category of the personal freedom and economic freedom subindexes.) Each indicator is rated on a 0–10 scale, with 10 representing the most freedom. We average the main components in each category to produce a rating for each of the categories. To produce a final rating on the personal freedom subindex, we average the Rule of Law and the Security and Safety categories and average that rating with the average of the remaining categories in the subindex. In the economic freedom subindex, we have five equally weighted parts: Size of Government, Legal System and Property Rights, Sound Money, Freedom to Trade Internationally, and Regulation. To produce the Human Freedom Index, we average the final country ratings of the economic and personal freedom subindexes.

WHAT THE INDEX MEASURES

The HFI measures economic freedoms such as the freedom to trade or to use sound money, and it captures the degree to which people are free to enjoy the major freedoms often referred to as civil liberties—freedom of speech, religion, association and assembly—

Note: Area 2 (Legal System and Property Rights) ratings in economic freedom are adjusted to reflect inequalities in the legal treatment of women. For the adjustment factor, see Chapter 2 in James Gwartney et al., Economic Freedom of the World: 2017 Annual Report (Vancouver: Fraser Institute, 2017) and Rosemarie Fike, "Adjusting for Gender Disparity in Economic Freedom and Why It Matters," in Gwartney et al, Economic Freedom of the World: 2017 Annual Report.

“The rule of law is an essential condition of freedom that protects the individual from coercion by others.”

in the countries in the survey. In addition, it includes indicators on rule of law, crime and violence, freedom of movement, and legal discrimination against same-sex relationships. We also include nine variables pertaining to women-specific freedoms that are found in various categories of the index.

We would have liked to include other important indicators, such as those quantifying drug and alcohol prohibition, but we found no reliable data sources that conformed to our methodological principles. What follows is a brief description and justification of the data we use in the personal freedom subindex, as well as a summary of the economic freedom indicators that make up the rest of the Human Freedom Index.

Rule of Law

The rule of law is an essential condition of freedom that protects the individual from coercion by others. John Locke's emphasis on the importance of law in securing and enlarging freedom, cited previously, is an early formulation of that concept. A society ruled “by law, not men” implies that laws apply to everybody, including the authorities; that they be publicly known and understood; and that they limit the arbitrary decisions of rulers. To further increase the scope of individual freedom and reduce potential rule by personal will, Hayek proposed that laws be general and abstract; that is, that they be ignorant of particular cases and “not single out any particular persons or group of persons.”¹³ The stated attributes also provide a social order that allows people to more easily pursue their individual ends. Individual freedom is therefore dependent on the rule of law, a broad concept that encompasses due process; equal treatment under the law; accountability of government officials; and notions of fairness, predictability, and justice.

We use indicators from the World Justice Project's Rule of Law Index that are consistent with our definition of freedom.¹⁴ We construct Rule of Law ratings for countries not included in the WJP index using the World

Bank's Governance Indicators.

It should be noted that the Economic Freedom of the World index includes nine components in the area of “Legal System and Property Rights” that seek to measure “how effectively the protective functions of government are performed.” Thus, the rule of law measures included in the personal freedom subindex add to those in the economic freedom subindex.

The first component rates what we have termed procedural justice. It is composed of the average of three indicators measuring “the right to life and security” of a person, “due process of law and rights of the accused,” and “freedom from arbitrary interference with privacy.” The first of those indicators refers to violations by the police or government when conducting an arrest or a search, for example.¹⁵ The second indicator refers to such issues as the extent to which police or the authorities respect the presumption of innocence, arrest people on genuine and formally declared charges, treat suspects humanely in custody, provide the accused full access to evidence, and the like. The third indicator refers to such violations as governments wiretapping private communications without judicial authorization.

The second component rates civil justice on such issues as whether it is free of discrimination, corruption, and improper government influence. It also measures the extent to which alternative dispute resolution mechanisms are accessible, impartial, and effective. The third component measures the criminal justice system on such issues as its impartiality, its level of corruption, and the degree to which improper government influence is present.

By including the Rule of Law category, the index more fully captures the extent to which people are exposed to abuse by the authorities, and therefore it provides a measure of whether and by how much one is “subject to another man's will,”¹⁶ to use Hayek's expression. The indicators we use not only rate the degree to which the rule of law may be undermined, but they also measure negative rights. Like safety and security, explained next, the rule of law concept included here significantly expands the scope of freedom by limiting coercion from a diversity of potential sources, including the most powerful entities or individuals in society, and thus encourages other freedoms to flourish.

Security and Safety

The rights to life and safety from physical aggression have long been recognized as fundamental to liberty. Violence of any kind, except in self-defense or in the administration of justice, reduces personal freedom and, in the case of violence that results in death, eliminates it altogether. In societies with low levels of personal safety and physical security from harm, it is difficult to exercise other freedoms, or even to survive. Like the rule of law, security and safety are thus important in safeguarding overall freedom. (Indeed, the provision of domestic and national security is a service that most classical liberals consider a proper function of government.) Unlike the Rule of Law category, which concerns rules that seek to reduce coercion, the Security and Safety category measures actual crimes committed. It attempts to measure the degree to which people who have not violated the equal rights of others are physically assaulted, kidnapped, or killed, or their physical integrity or safety is otherwise violated. Because security is necessary to fully exercise the whole array of freedoms, we give this category equal weight to the Rule of Law category, and both together are weighed equally with the rest of the personal freedom index.

Whether perpetrated by ordinary criminals, governments, organized gangs, political groups, or individuals following tradition, crime and physical transgressions reduce personal freedom in any society. The first component measures the homicide rate. Here we ignore optimal-level-of-crime considerations or, as with the Rule of Law category, any account of the use of public resources to provide a public good intended to enhance freedom but that by its nature (taxation) represents a reduction in freedom.¹⁷

The second component measures disappearances, conflict, and terrorism. It is made up of a number of variables. The first measures politically motivated disappearances. The following two indicators—violent conflicts and internally organized conflicts—measure the extent to which war or armed conflict with internal or external aggressors impinges on personal freedom in observed countries. The violent conflicts variable reflects battle-related deaths per capita. For the level of internally organized conflict, we use a “qualitative assessment of the intensity of conflicts within” each country used by the Institute for Economics and Peace’s Global Peace Index but derived by the Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU). The next two indicators rate the level of fatalities and injuries resulting from terrorism. Those figures, from the University of Maryland’s Global Terrorism Database, include deaths and injuries of both perpetrators and victims.

The next component rates women’s security. It is made up of three main variables. The first measures the prevalence of female genital mutilation among the population of women in a given country. The next indicator refers to the number of missing women in a country, typically due to sex-selective abortions and infanticide of females. The final variable in this component measures whether when it comes to inheritance the legal system favors males as compared to widows and daughters. Favoring males is an infringement on the liberty of parents and on the daughters to whom they might otherwise choose to bequeath their assets. The practice is a reality that in many countries subordinates women to the power of men, often putting them in economically precarious or physically vulnerable situations.

Movement

The freedom to travel is a basic human right and essential to a free society. Governments that restrict people’s movement greatly limit the scope of overall liberty because those limits severely reduce the ability of people to engage in a wide range of peaceful activities of their choosing. The first two indicators in this category rate the freedom of domestic movement and the freedom to leave the country, respectively. The third component, women’s movement, measures the extent to which women can “move freely outside of the house.”

“Governments that restrict people’s movement greatly limit the scope of overall liberty.”

“The freedom to associate and assemble with peaceful individuals or organizations of one’s choice is an essential part of individual freedom and a basis of civil society.”

Religion

Free societies respect the right to practice a religion of one’s choosing. The exercise of religion can be both a supremely private matter involving a person’s strongest beliefs and a social affair practiced in an organized way among larger groups. Restrictions on that fundamental freedom have been the source of some of the bloodiest and most drawn-out conflicts throughout history, and they continue to animate discord in numerous countries today.

We use three components in this category. The first rates the freedom to establish and operate religious organizations. The next component relates to infringements on religious freedom characterized by harassment and physical hostility. Not only governments but also individuals, members of opposing religions, and other groups in society can perpetrate those violations. Last, we measure restrictions on religion that are of a legal or regulatory nature.

Association, Assembly, and Civil Society

The freedom to associate and assemble with peaceful individuals or organizations of one’s choice and to form or join organizations for political, commercial, or other ends is an essential part of individual freedom and a basis of civil society. This category is made up of three components: freedom of association, freedom of assembly, and freedom to establish and operate organizations. The last component is made up of three indicators—political parties;¹⁸ professional organizations; and educational, sporting, and cultural organizations—gauging the extent to which those organizations can be established and can freely operate once they are set up.

Expression and Information

This category measures a broad range of freedom, including that affecting personal expression, the press, and use of the internet.

Press killed refers to murders of journalists “in retribution for, or to prevent, news coverage or commentary” and journalists killed on dangerous assignments as documented by the Committee to Protect Journalists. Press jailed refers to the number of journalists imprisoned as documented by the same source. Laws and regulations that influence media content is an assessment by Freedom House of the legal environment that governments can use to “restrict the media’s ability to operate.” The next measure is a Freedom House assessment of the political environment’s influence on the media—namely, political pressure over news and editorial content. It also evaluates “the vibrancy of the media and the diversity of news available within each country” and indicators of violence against journalists. There is some overlap of coverage among those components.

The next two indicators are freedom of access to cable/satellite, which often includes foreign television, and access to foreign newspapers. We believe that access to foreign media sources can vastly increase the level of freedom in a country not only by providing individuals with much more information than is locally available but also by increasing media competition and strengthening the role the media often play as a watchdog and exponent of transparency in government. The last component in this category gauges state control over internet access; it is an increasingly important measure of freedom of expression as use of the internet spreads and government efforts to control it become more sophisticated and frequent.

Identity and Relationships

Last, we measure what we broadly categorize as freedoms to establish one’s own identity and to have intimate and familial relationships with others.

One of the most personal decisions individuals can make regards their sexual and gender identity. Legal gender measures the degree to which people are free to legally change their sex and gender.

Parental rights refers to the extent to which women have equal rights based in law and custom regarding “legal guardianship of a child during a marriage and custody rights over a child after divorce.” Because this indicator does not assess the nature of those rights but rather the equality of rights between genders, it is a proxy of one aspect of women’s freedom rather than a direct measure of freedom.

The next component rates the freedom of individuals to establish same-sex relationships. It is composed of two variables from the International Lesbian and Gay Association: a male-to-male relationship indicator that gauges the extent to which sexual relationships between men are legal and a female-to-female indicator that gauges the same for relationships between women. The last component measures “whether women and men have the same rights to initiate divorce.”

Economic Freedom Measures

The 42 indicators that make up the economic freedom subindex fall into five broad categories. A complete description of the economic freedom structure and index methodology can be found in the Fraser Institute’s Economic Freedom of the World annual reports. The first category is size of government. It measures taxation, government spending, and government investment and control of enterprises. An increase in those indicators reduces economic freedom as it crowds out individual choice. The second category regards the legal system and property rights and gauges the level of protection of people and their property rights through indicators of the impartiality of courts, judicial independence, and the enforcement of contracts, among others.

Sound money constitutes the third category. To the extent that a country’s money is not a reliable store of value, it undermines exchange, hinders economic planning, distorts prices, and, through inflation, serves as a tax. The inflation rate and its volatility are among the indicators measured here. The fourth category is freedom to trade internationally and measures tariff rates, nontariff trade barriers, and controls on capital movement, among other indicators. The fifth category regards the regulation of business, labor, and credit. To the extent that government restricts competition in business, voluntary arrangements among employers and employees, and freedom of exchange in credit markets, economic freedom is reduced. Areas measured include interest rate controls, hiring and firing regulations, and licensing restrictions, among others.

FINDINGS

Table 2 presents the ratings and rankings of countries on the overall Human Freedom Index for 2015. It also presents the ratings of the countries on the personal and economic freedom subindexes.

The top five jurisdictions in the Human Freedom Index for 2015 are Switzerland, Hong Kong, New Zealand, Ireland, and Australia. The bottom five, in descending order, are Egypt, the Republic of Yemen, Libya,

“One of the most personal decisions individuals can make regards their sexual and gender identity.”

Venezuela, and Syria. (See Figure 1.) Other selected countries are ranked as follows: the United Kingdom (9), Canada (11), Sweden (13), Germany (16), the United States (17), Japan (27), France (33), Chile (37), South Africa (68), Mexico (73), Indonesia (78), Turkey (84), Kenya (89), India (102), Russia (126), China (130), and Saudi Arabia (149).

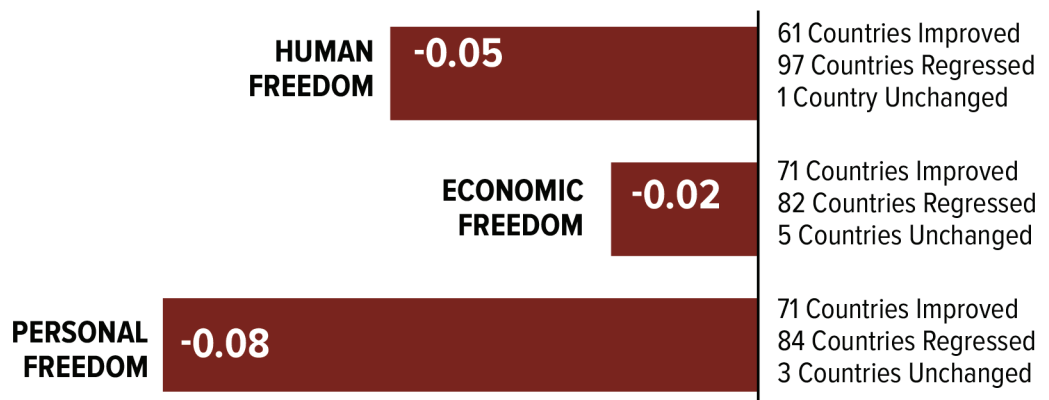

The average human freedom rating for 159 countries in 2015 was 6.93, on a scale of 0 to 10, where 10 represents more freedom. The level of freedom decreased slightly (-0.05) compared with 2014, with 61 countries increasing their ratings and 97 decreasing. (See Figure 2.) Examined over a longer period, the average human freedom rating decreased by 0.12 from 2008 to 2015. But when comparing only the 141 jurisdictions for which data are available from 2008 to 2015 (the HFI surveys 18 more countries in 2015 than in 2008), the average human freedom rating decreased by 0.05, with personal freedom falling from 7.36 to 7.20 and economic freedom increasing from 6.74 to 6.81. Some 68 countries increased their overall freedom ratings from 2008 to 2015, while 69 countries decreased their freedom. Some 15 percent of the world’s population lives in the top quartile of nations in the index, while 44 percent of the world’s population lives in the bottom quartile of countries that have low levels of freedom.

The countries that improved their level of human freedom most from 2014 to 2015 are Sierra Leone (0.33), Iran (0.31), Botswana (0.30), Singapore (0.29), and Suriname (0.27). (See Figure 3.) Other countries that saw notable improvements were Cambodia (0.27), Israel (0.24), Serbia (0.19), Central African Republic (0.19), and Colombia (0.18). The largest deteriorations in freedom occurred in Burundi (-0.92), Brunei Darussalam (-0.71), Cameroon (-0.64), Venezuela (-0.61), and Tajikistan (-0.61).

Since 2008, the countries that most improved their level of human freedom are Taiwan, Angola, Myanmar, Côte d'Ivoire, and Lesotho. The largest deteriorations in freedom occurred in Syria, Egypt, Venezuela, Belize, and Greece. Other countries saw notable deteriorations during this time. Russia's rating fell from 6.54 in 2008 to 6.11 in 2015; Hungary's rating fell from 8.06 to 7.74; Argentina's score dropped from 7.12 to 6.46; and Turkey's rating decreased from 7.25 in 2011 to 6.77 in 2015.

The correlation between the personal and economic freedom ratings was 0.64 for 2015. (See Figure 4.) Thus, some countries ranked consistently high in the human freedom sub-indexes, including Switzerland, New Zealand, and Australia, which ranked in the top 10 in both personal and economic freedom. By contrast, some countries that ranked high on economic freedom saw their positions fall significantly on the Human Freedom Index. For example, Singapore ranked in second place in economic freedom in 2015 but ranked 18th on

Figure 5 shows that nations in the top quartile of personal freedom saw a high economic freedom score of 7.66, compared with a score of 6.02 for bottom-quartile nations.

Regional levels of freedom vary widely. The average ratings on the Human Freedom Index by region were highest for Western Europe, followed by Northern Europe and

North America (Canada and the United States). They were lowest for sub-Saharan Africa, South Asia, Eastern Europe (Moldova, Russia, and Ukraine), and the Middle East and North Africa. The largest improvement in freedom since 2014 occurred in Australia and Oceania (0.07), while the largest deterioration occurred in Eastern Europe (-0.36). By comparison, the largest improvement in freedom since 2008 occurred in East Asia (0.18) and South Asia (0.18), while the largest deteriorations in freedom occurred in the two least free regions, Eastern Europe (-0.52) and the Middle East and North Africa (-0.46) (Figure 7). The regions that had greater overall levels of freedom also tended to exhibit higher ratings in personal freedom relative to economic freedom. That is consistent with the findings in Figure 5, that the countries with high levels of personal freedom also have high levels of economic freedom.

The personal freedom subindex includes seven indicators that relate to women-specific freedoms: female genital mutilation, missing women, equal inheritance rights, women’s freedom of movement, parental rights, female-to-female relationships, and divorce. Although they surely fall short of capturing a complete measure of women’s freedoms, the indicators cover a large range of important information and are likely correlated with other women-specific indicators of liberty not represented in cross-country data. Here we have averaged the seven components to get average ratings by region of women-specific personal freedom.¹⁹ Following that calculation, Figure 8 shows high levels of women-specific freedom in most regions of the world, with declining freedom in South East Asia (7.60), sub-Saharan Africa (6.85), South Asia (6.13), and the Middle East and North Africa (4.18). Only two regions have seen a decline since 2014: Central America, Mexico and the Caribbean (-0.27) and the Middle East and North Africa (-0.41).

Does human freedom matter for development? There is a strong relationship between the level of freedom and income. Figure 9 shows that countries in the freest quartile enjoy significantly greater average per capita income ($38,871) than those in the other quartiles.²⁰ On average, the freest countries in the world have a much higher per capita income than those that are less free. Figure 10 shows this relationship by region. These data, of course, do not establish a means of causation or even the direction of causation, and they are only a snapshot in time. But the data suggest the need to explore the links between freedom and development further and to test the contribution of freedom to prosperity and other indicators of human well-being as has been done in the case of policies and institutions supportive of economic freedom.

What is the relationship between freedom and democracy? We use our index and the Economist Intelligence Unit's Democracy Index to see how political freedom and human freedom relate. The EIU defines democracy broadly and thus constructs an index that produces a "wide" measure of democracy, as opposed to a more limited measure of the existence of free and fair elections. The EIU's Democracy Index covers five areas, of which we use the following four: electoral process and pluralism, functioning of government, political participation, and political culture. That index also measures civil liberties, but we set those elements aside because that area is included in our freedom index.

There is a strong correlation of 0.81 between freedom and democracy. (See Figure 11.) The findings are not surprising, but they offer rich opportunities to empirically examine a complex relationship in which the direction of causation or support between the two variables, if any, may strengthen or weaken over time and may be influenced by numerous other factors, including the level of development.

Given the relationship between freedom and democracy, Hong Kong's high ranking in our index may be somewhat unexpected. The territory, first administered by the United Kingdom as a colony and since 1997 ruled by mainland China under its "one country, two systems" model, has never experienced democracy. Hong Kong's maintenance of a high degree of freedom for a long period of time indeed makes it an outlier in our survey. The pro-democracy protests that erupted in Hong Kong in 2014 may in part be a late manifestation of a pattern we have seen in other non-democracies that liberalized their economies and subsequently liberalized their political systems as wealth and demands for political freedoms rose. Even so, Hong Kong is unique in that it long enjoyed high levels not only of economic freedom but also of personal freedom and income without transitioning to democracy. The territory's close adherence to the policies and institutions it inherited from the British, including the rule of law, may explain the stability its system has until recently displayed. Clearly, the pro-democracy protests represent a political agenda not acceptable to Beijing and are a reaction to interference and perceived interference by mainland China in Hong Kong's policies and institutions, including infringements on freedom of the press and the independence of the legal system. Hong Kong has declined in its HFI ratings and ranking and, as the political future of Hong Kong plays out, we would not be surprised to see further declines.

CONCLUSION: TOWARD A BETTER APPRECIATION OF FREEDOM

The Human Freedom Index provides a comprehensive measure of freedom for a large number of countries around the world. Devising an index of this kind is a complex task, both conceptually and methodologically, because the literature does not provide clear guidance, much less consensus, as to the relative importance of the many different elements that make up freedom or as to proper ways of measuring them. Reasonable people can disagree regarding the difficult but considered decisions we have made in terms of the structure and relative importance of the measures we have chosen. We invite them to use the data presented here to propose alternative weighting or structural approaches that seem more sensible to them. Because of the challenges in putting together a broad measure of human freedom, this work in progress is certainly not the last word on the extent of freedom in countries around the world. But we do think this index is quite reasonable and hope it will be useful in exploring and demonstrating the value of individual liberty and the ways in which it correlates with other aspects of various societies.

Even if this study confirms some of what we expected to observe, it is worth echoing Milton Friedman when he referred to the creation of the Economic Freedom of the World index: “What we have done is to acquire a set of data that can be used to explore just how the relation works, and what are the essential connections, and that will enable skeptics to test their views objectively.”²¹

Indeed, the Economic Freedom of the World index has served just that purpose and more, producing an abundant literature on the link between economic freedom and phenomena as diverse as foreign aid, armed conflict, and happiness. The Human Freedom Index has the potential to do as much and looks increasingly important at a time when the world’s leading market democracies struggle with economic problems and when hybrid forms of authoritarianism are being sold as viable alternatives to liberalism. Over time, this index could not only track specific gains and losses of freedom, it could also help identify and understand what links may exist among the assortment of freedoms and other variables. What are the relationships among personal freedom, economic freedom, and democracy at different levels of development? Are some types of freedom—economic or personal—more conducive to the spread and sustenance of other freedoms? What is the relationship between various measures of human well-being (including income) and changes in personal freedom? Under what conditions are increases or decreases in freedom likely to come about? Delving into those and innumerable other questions that the data may help us answer will surely lead to a better understanding of the role of freedom in human progress.

Human Freedom Ranking over Time

METHODOLOGY AND SOURCES

1. LEGAL PROTECTION AND SECURITY

1A. RULE OF LAW

1Ai. Procedural Justice

This component is calculated as an average of selected Rule of Law Index subfactors: “4.2 The right to life and security of the person is effectively guaranteed,” “4.3 Due process of law and rights of the accused,” and “4.6 Freedom from arbitrary interference with privacy is effectively guaranteed.” A continuous score ranges from 0 to 10, where a rating of 10 is assigned to countries with full adherence to the rule of law from the perspective of how ordinary people experience it and a 0 rating is assigned to countries with no adherence to the rule of law from the perspective of how ordinary people experience it.

1Aii. Civil Justice

This component is calculated as an average of selected Rule of Law Index subfactors: “7.1 People can access and afford civil justice,” “7.2 Civil justice is free of discrimination,” “7.3 Civil justice is free of corruption,” “7.4 Civil justice is free of improper government influence,” “7.5 Civil justice is not subject to unreasonable delay,” “7.6 Civil justice is effectively enforced,” and “7.7 Alternative dispute resolution is accessible, impartial, and effective.” A continuous score ranges from 0 to 1, where 0 means no adherence to the rule of law from the perspective of how ordinary people experience it and 1 means full adherence to the rule of law from the perspective of how ordinary people experience it.

Source: World Justice Project, Rule of Law Index.

1Aiii. Criminal Justice

This component is calculated as an average of selected Rule of Law Index subfactors: “8.1 Criminal investigation system is effective,” “8.2 Criminal adjudication system is timely and effective,” “8.3 Correctional system is effective in reducing criminal behavior,” “8.4 Criminal system is impartial,” “8.5 Criminal system is free of corruption,” “8.6 Criminal system is free of improper government influence,” and “8.7 Due process of law and rights of the accused.” A continuous score ranges from 0 to 10, where 0 means no adherence to the rule of law from the perspective of how ordinary people experience it and 1 means full adherence to the rule of law from the perspective of how ordinary people experience it.

1B. SECURITY AND SAFETY

1Bi. Homicide

This component is based on the United Nations (UN) Office on Drugs and Crime’s data on the intentional homicides per 100,000 population. Countries with more homicides per 100,000 population received lower ratings. A rating of 10 would have been assigned to countries with no homicides per 100,000 population. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries with 25 or more homicides per 100,000 population. Countries with 1 through 24 homicides per 100,000 population received corresponding ratings between 10 and 0.

1Bii. Disappearances, Conflict, and Terrorism

1Bii(a). Disappearances

This subcomponent is based on the CI-RIGHTS Dataset on disappearances. Countries with more disappearances received lower ratings. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with no disappearances. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries with disappearances occurring occasionally. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries with frequently occurring disappearances.

1Bii(b). Violent Conflicts

This subcomponent is based on the Uppsala Conflict Data Program's data on battle-related deaths per one million population. It measures battle-related deaths from armed-conflict behavior between warring parties in a conflict dyad, be it state based or non-state based. In state-based conflicts, the violence must be directly related to the incompatibility (of the positions of the conflicting parties regarding government or territory)—that is, carried out with the purpose of realizing the goal of the incompatibility and having resulted in deaths. In non-state-based conflicts, the violence does not have to be related to an incompatibility but must take place between warring parties and result in deaths. All deaths—military as well as civilian—are counted as battle-related deaths. Countries with more battle-related deaths per one million population received lower ratings. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with no battle-related deaths per one million population. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries with 30 or more battle-related deaths per one million population. Countries with 1 through 29 battle-related deaths per one million population received corresponding ratings between 10 and 0.

Source: Uppsala Conflict Data Program, Battle-Related Deaths Dataset.

1Bii(c). Organized Conflict

This subcomponent is based on the Economist Intelligence Unit's qualitative assessment of the intensity of conflicts within the country. Countries with higher intensity of conflicts received lower ratings. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with very low intensity of conflicts. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries with very high intensity of conflicts. Countries in between received ratings of 7.5, 5.0, and 2.5, accordingly.

1Bii(d). Terrorism Fatalities

This subcomponent is based on the University of Maryland's Global Terrorism Database on the confirmed terrorism fatalities. The number includes all victims and attackers who died as a direct result of the incident. Countries with more confirmed terrorism fatalities per one million population received lower ratings. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with no confirmed terrorism fatalities per one million population. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries with 30 or more confirmed terrorism fatalities per one million population. Countries with 1 through 29 confirmed terrorism fatalities per one million population received corresponding ratings between 10 and 0.

1Bii(e). Terrorism Injuries

This subcomponent is based on the University of Maryland's Global Terrorism Database on the confirmed terrorism nonfatal injuries to both perpetrators and victims. Countries with more confirmed terrorism nonfatal injuries per one million population received lower ratings. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with no confirmed terrorism nonfatal injuries per one million population. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries with 50 or more confirmed terrorism nonfatal injuries per one million population. Countries with 1 through 49 confirmed terrorism nonfatal injuries per one million population received corresponding ratings between 10 and 0.

1Biii. Women's Security

1Biii(a). Female Genital Mutilation

This subcomponent measures the percentage of women in the country who have undergone any type of female genital mutilation. A continuous score ranges from 0 to 10, where a rating of 10 was assigned to countries with no prevalence of female genital mutilation and a rating of 0 was assigned to countries with complete prevalence of female genital mutilation.

Source: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), Social Institutions and Gender Index.

1Biii(b). Missing Women

This subcomponent measures gender bias in mortality or, euphemistically, “son preference.” A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with no evidence of missing women. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries with a severe incidence of excess female mortality or missing women. Countries in between received ratings of 7.5, 5.0, and 2.5, accordingly.

Source: OECD, Social Institutions and Gender Index.

1Biii(c). Inheritance

This subcomponent is based on the legal code available and divided into two indicators: (1) inheritance rights of widows and (2) inheritance rights of daughters. The final scoring of this indicator can also be driven by the actual application of the law (or the lack thereof). A rating of 10 was assigned to countries where women have equal rights of inheritance. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries where (some) women have (some) rights of inheritance, but less than men. A rating of 0 is assigned to countries where women have no rights of inheritance.

2. SPECIFIC PERSONAL FREEDOMS

2A. MOVEMENT

2Ai. Freedom of Foreign Movement

This component is based on the CI-RIGHTS Dataset on the citizens’ freedom to leave and return to their country. Countries with more freedom of foreign movement received higher ratings. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with unrestricted freedom of foreign movement. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries with some restrictions on freedom of foreign movement. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries with severe restrictions on freedom of foreign movement.

Source: David Cingranelli and Mikhail Filippov, CI-RIGHTS Dataset.

2Aii. Freedom of Domestic Movement

This component is based on the CI-RIGHTS Dataset on the citizens’ freedom to travel within their own country. Countries with more freedom of domestic movement received higher ratings. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with unrestricted freedom of domestic movement. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries with some restrictions on freedom of domestic movement. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries with severe restrictions on freedom of domestic movement.

Source: David Cingranelli and Mikhail Filippov, CI-RIGHTS Dataset.

2Aiii. Women’s Freedom of Movement

This component measures the freedom of women to move outside the home. The following elements were considered: ability to choose their places of residence, to visit their families and friends, or to apply for a passport. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with no restrictions on women’s movement outside the home. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries where (some) women can leave home sometimes but with restrictions. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries where women can never leave home without restrictions (e.g., they need a male companion).

2B. RELIGION

2Bi. Establishing and Operating Religious Organizations

This component is from this Institutional Profiles Database variable: “A3093: Freedom to establish and operate organizations: religious organizations. (0 = no establishment and operational independence possible; 4 = total freedom to establish and operate.)”

Source: French Ministry of the Economy, Institutional Profiles Database.

2Bii. Harassment and Physical Hostilities

This component is calculated as an average of selected Global Restrictions on Religion questions:

- “GRI_Q_6: Is proselytizing limited by any level of government? (0 = No; 0.50 = Yes, for some religious groups; 1.00 = Yes, for all religious groups)” Assigned weight = 0.5.

2D. EXPRESSION

2Di. Press Killed

The component measures journalists killed covering news or offering comment on public affairs in print, in photographs, on radio, on television, or online. As such, the component includes writers, editors, publishers, producers, technicians, photographers, camera operators, and directors of news organizations. Countries with three or more journalists killed per 100,000 population earn a rating of 0. As the number of journalists killed per 100,000 population moves toward zero, the rating for this component moves toward 10. A 10 rating is assigned to countries with no journalists killed.

Source: Committee to Protect Journalists, Killed Census.

2Dii. Press Jailed

The component measures journalists imprisoned for covering news or offering comment on public affairs in print, in photographs, on radio, on television, or online. As such, the component includes writers, editors, publishers, producers, technicians, photographers, camera operators, and directors of news organizations. Countries with 1 or more journalists imprisoned per 1 million population earn a rating of 0. As the number of journalists imprisoned per 1 million population moves toward zero, the rating for this component moves toward 10. A rating of 10 is assigned to countries with no journalists imprisoned.

Source: Committee to Protect Journalists, Prison Census.

2Diii. Laws and Regulations that Influence Media Content

The component measures both the laws and regulations that could influence media content and the government's inclination to use these laws and legal institutions to restrict the media's ability to operate. Assessed were the positive impact of legal and constitutional guarantees for freedom of expression; the potentially negative aspects of security legislation, the penal code, and other criminal statutes; penalties for libel and defamation; the existence of and ability to use freedom of information legislation; the independence of the judiciary and of official media regulatory bodies; registration requirements for both media outlets and journalists; and the ability of journalists' groups to operate freely. A continuous score ranges from 0 to 10, where countries with more freedom of the press receive higher ratings.

Source: Freedom House, Freedom of the Press.

2Div. Political Pressures and Controls on Media Content

The component measures the degree of political control over the content of news media. Issues examined included the editorial independence of both state-owned and privately owned media; access to information and sources; official censorship and self-censorship; the vibrancy of the media and the diversity of news available within each country; the ability of both foreign and local reporters to cover the news freely and without harassment; and the intimidation of journalists by the state or other actors, including arbitrary detention and imprisonment, violent assaults, and other threats. A continuous score ranges from 0 to 10, where countries with more freedom of the press receive higher ratings.

2Dv. Access to Cable/Satellite

This component is from this Institutional Profiles Database question: "Freedom of information: Freedom of access to cable/satellite (television). (0 = no freedom of access to cable/satellite; 4 = complete freedom of access to cable/satellite.)"

Source: French Ministry of the Economy, Institutional Profiles Database.

2Dvi. Access to Foreign Newspapers

This component is from this Institutional Profiles Database question: "Freedom of information: Freedom of access to foreign newspapers (no seizures, censorship, etc.). (0 = no freedom of access to foreign newspapers; 4 = complete freedom of access to foreign newspapers.)"

Source: French Ministry of the Economy, Institutional Profiles Database.

2Dvii. State Control over Internet Access

This component is from this Institutional Profiles Database question: “Freedom of information: Freedom of access, navigation, and publication on the Internet. (0 = no freedom of Internet access; 4 = complete freedom of navigation and publication.)”

Source: French Ministry of the Economy, Institutional Profiles Database.

2E. RELATIONSHIPS

2Ei. Legal Gender

The component is based on the measures for sex/gender marker change, upon which rating intervals were constructed. Countries with more restrictions and requirements for sex/gender marker change received lower ratings. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with no requirements for sex/gender marker change. A rating of 7 was assigned to countries with prohibitive medical requirements, including hormonal treatment, sterilization, and genital surgery. A rating of 0 is assigned to countries without a possibility for sex/gender marker change.

2Eii. Parental Rights

2Eii(a). Parental Rights: In Marriage

This subcomponent measures whether women and men have the same right to be the legal guardian of a child during marriage. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with equal legal rights for women and men. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries where the law guarantees the same parental authority to women and men during marriage but where there are some customary, traditional, or religious practices that discriminate against women. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries where the law does not guarantee the same parental authority to women and men during marriage or where women have no rights to parental authority.

Source: OECD, Social Institutions and Gender Index.

2Eii(b). Parental Rights: After Divorce

This subcomponent measures whether women and men have the same right to be the legal guardian of and have custody rights over a child after divorce. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries with equal legal rights for women and men. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries where the law guarantees the same parental authority to women and men after divorce but where there are some customary, traditional, or religious practices that discriminate against women. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries where the law does not guarantee the same parental authority to women and men after divorce or where women have no rights to parental authority.

2Eiii. Same-Sex Relationships

2Eiii(a). Male-to-Male Relationships

This subcomponent is based on the International Lesbian and Gay Association’s Sexual Orientation Laws Dataset on male-to-male relationships. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries where male-to-male relationships are legal. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries where male-to-male relationships are legal only in some areas of the country. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries where male-to-male relationships are illegal.

Source: International Lesbian and Gay Association, Sexual Orientation Laws Dataset.

2Eiii(b). Female-to-Female Relationships

This subcomponent is based on the International Lesbian and Gay Association's Sexual Orientation Laws Dataset on female-to-female relationships. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries where female-to-female relationships are legal. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries where female-to-female relationships are legal only in some areas of the country. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries where female-to-female relationships are illegal.

Source: International Lesbian and Gay Association, Sexual Orientation Laws Dataset.

2Eiv. Divorce

This component measures the extent to which women and men have the same rights to initiate divorce. A rating of 10 was assigned to countries where the law guarantees the same rights to initiate divorce to both women and men. A rating of 5 was assigned to countries where the law guarantees the same rights to initiate divorce to both men and women, but where there are some customary, traditional, or religious practices that prevent or restrict some women's ability to initiate divorce. A rating of 0 was assigned to countries where the law does not guarantee the same rights to initiate divorce to men and women or where women have no rights to initiate divorce at all.

This source provides data for 92 countries in our index for years 2008 and 2009, for 94 countries for the years

2010 and 2011, for 95 countries for the years 2012 and 2013, for 99 countries for the year 2014, and for 104 countries for the year 2015. To derive Rule of Law ratings for the remaining countries in our index, we regressed the WJP Rule of Law measures we constructed with the rule of law measures from the World Bank's Governance Indicators (which produced a correlation coefficient of 0.93 using the 2012 WJP report, 0.95 using the 2014 WJP report, 0.94 using the 2015 WJP report, and 0.92 using the 2016 WJP report).

McMahon brings up the problem of "how restrictions on freedom that are designed to enhance freedom should be measured" in the brief, "Some Issues Concerning the Scope of a Freedom Measure," presented in a colloquium in Potsdam, Germany, in June 2010, organized by the Friedrich Naumann Foundation.

18. Because the source of our data on political parties (Institutional Profiles Database) had apparent problems with that data for 2015, the data we are using for that indicator comes from our previous HFI report.

19. Two of the seven variables are made up of the average of two subvariables. Equal Inheritance Rights is the average of inheritance rights of spouses and inheritance rights of daughters, and Parental Rights is the average of parental rights in marriage and parental rights after divorce. Thus, the overall Human Freedom Index includes nine indicators on women-specific freedoms, but this graph averages the seven indicators mentioned.

20. The third quartile of countries by freedom has a slightly higher average per capita income than the second quartile as a result of including a number of small, oil-rich countries such as Brunei (per capita income of $74,600), Bahrain ($44,508), United Arab Emirates ($65,975), and Qatar ($119,749).

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Ian Vásquez is the director of the Center for Global Liberty and Prosperity at the Cato Institute and a columnist at El Comercio, a newspaper in Peru.

Tanja Porčnik is president and cofounder of the Visio Institute, a think tank based in Slovenia, and an adjunct scholar of the Cato Institute. She was formerly a senior fellow at the Atlas Economic Research Foundation; a government teaching fellow at the American Institute on Political and Economic Systems in Prague, Czech Republic (a joint program of Georgetown University and the Fund for American Studies); and a research associate and manager of external relations at the Cato Institute.

ABOUT THE COPUBLISHERS

Cato Institute

The Cato Institute is a public policy research foundation dedicated to broadening the parameters of public policy debate to allow consideration of more options that are consistent with the principles of limited government, individual liberty, and peace. To that end, the Institute strives to achieve greater involvement of the intelligent, concerned lay public in questions of policy and the proper role of government through an extensive program of publications and seminars. The Institute is based in Washington, D.C.

Fraser Institute

Founded in 1974, the Fraser Institute is an independent research and educational organization with offices across Canada and international partners in over 90 nations and territories. Our mission is to improve the quality of life for Canadians, their families, and future generations by studying, measuring, and broadly communicating the effects of government policies, entrepreneurship, and choice on their well-being. Our work is financed by tax-deductible contributions from thousands of individuals, organizations, and foundations. In order to protect its independence, the Institute does not accept grants from government or contracts for research.

Liberales Institut

The Liberales Institut is the think tank of the Friedrich Naumann Foundation for Freedom, based in Potsdam, Germany. It spreads liberal and free-market ideas through publications, the analysis of political trends, and the promotion of research. It aims to promote the goal of making freedom valid for the dignity of all people and in all areas of society, both in Germany and abroad. Its policies work toward promoting the rule of law, democracy, and the worldwide liberalization of all markets: information, technology, goods and services, as well as currency and capital markets. The Institute organizes conferences and workshops to stimulate an intellectual exchange among liberals around the world.

ASSOCIATE COPUBLISHERS

The Institute of Economic Analysis

The Institute of Economic Analysis (IEA) is an independent, nongovernmental, nonpartisan, nonprofit research center established in 1994 in Moscow, Russia. The IEA conducts research on economic, social, political, legal, energy, climate, international relations, and security issues and policies related to Russia, post-Soviet states, and other countries in transition. The IEA has advised Russian authorities on a wide range of economic, social, and foreign policy reforms that have led to the doubling of Russia's gross domestic product within 10 years (1998–2008) and to Russia's joining the G8 club in 2002. Currently, the IEA focuses on advising the Russian and international expert community and public at large on building rule-of-law-based, democratic, open, tolerant, and free societies and polities in Russia and in neighboring countries.

Visio Institute

The Visio Institute is an independent, nonpartisan research organization based in Slovenia. Its aim is to develop and promote public policy and institutional reform proposals to foster an open, free, developed, and just society in Slovenia. To that end, the Visio Institute organizes events, produces publications, and appears regularly in the media.
